

Hebrew-Christian Missionaries

Don't Help Them Succeed

How Jews react to Hebrew-Christians will determine whether they consider their efforts a success or failure. They thrive on interaction. The most effective way to deal with them is to ignore them. They want and need publicity – positive or negative.

How Jews Should Act – Don'ts and Dos

- Don't take a flyer – it will count as part of their total for “flyers distributed”.
- Don't engage in conversations with the missionaries
 - They are trained in the sales technique of Hebrew-Christianity through the manipulated use of our Torah.
- Don't give them your name, address, e-mail or phone number
 - They will follow-up on this contact information
 - It gives them “proof” that they are successful to their funders
- Don't react with anger or aggression - You are always a Jewish ambassador
 - Don't be insulting. It makes them feel like martyrs
 - Any violence or acts of vandalism is just great publicity for them and helps Hebrew-Christian groups raise money.
 - Just hang up the phone, close the door or keep walking
- ❖ Do respond with a “No, thank you” or “I'm happy with my Judaism.”
- ❖ Do tell us when and where you saw the Hebrew-Christians.
- ❖ Do find ways to connect with Judaism and your community.
